“ Dennis was making it to class daily. So, even if he didn't come to my class, when I saw him in the halls, I would give him a hug and words of encouragement. He needed to be assured that I sincerely cared about him and not just my class.

Then, he finally started coming to class. I would celebrate his attendance with a hug and encouragement. I had been speaking to Dennis about how intelligent he really was and how much he could accomplish if he would just focus. He said “I promise. I got you”

For the next few weeks, he did everything in his power and was able to bring up a very low “F” to a very high “C”. I was so excited. I knew he was smart and he was so much more confident. He started coming to class daily and participated in all the activities. He was such a loving , intelligent and caring young man. I will sincerely miss him.
