“ It's been a month since God called you home and my life hasn't been the same. I knew that day would arrive but when it did..... I was not prepared lose her. No one can ever be prepared to lose a mother but we continue in their name and spirit. There are no amount of words to say describe how she will be missed. As an only child, she was all I knew and all of my lessons came directly from a STRONG BLACK MOTHER. I love her more than life itself and it's still seems like a bad dream that you are not here physically. But your spirit lives in me and especially in her grandson. They act just alike sometimes Lol !!!! Her best title was Motherher GREATEST TITLE was Grandmother and I thank God everyday she had the chance to experience that. She loved her grandson more than anything imaginable. I hope TJ reads this one day and know that. As for me, I can only continue to move in the way she would, with the wisdom of the owls. I pray she is resting well in her Garden of Serenity. It's such a beautiful place and I look very forward to visiting her there often. A mother's love never burns out. The Bible tells us this truth. I will always love her even in when my time ends and we shall meet again.

“ Rest well, Aunt Cheryl. In the twinkling of an eye, you've arrived in the arms of the One who treasures you beyond measure, and made more perfect than any of us who truly love you could ever have hoped for in this life. Meanwhile, your memory lives in us, and we'll see you and Antoine at the gate in Glory.
