“ I met Greg at electronic school & we became fast friends. We would study together & Greg would have study groups at his home. He was a sensitive soul and very caring man. He taught my children how to fly their kites with his son Greg. His love for music & computers was his passion. We still stayed in touch updating each other on our children growth/careers and I would check on the progress of him getting his eye sight back. He had some big plans. I will truly miss my friend. My condolences goes out to his family. He will truly be missed.

“ This man, better said great friend. Washington always there for me. We shared so much together. I lived with him, and was covered by his love and good teaching. Yes! He was always moving forward. He never let any bad news break him. He was my Best Man & Most Confident Supporter. He Knew that I was different. But he befriended and I was Greatly Rewarded

“ My Dearest Gregory,

This is the last letter I will write you. We met when we were both 18. You were my first love and until now my last. We have built so many memories, that I will treasure and hold dear. You were there for my Children when they needed it the most. I will always thank God for bringing you into my life. Through you I met such a wonderful person, that will always be special in my life, and hold that special place in my heart, just as you will always. Your mother! I can only imagine how her heart feels this moment. You were excited about getting your eyes, and all of the adventure. You were looking to accomplish. God has given them to you with x ray vision to see eternity now, and have that Worldly adventure anywhere you desire. I will miss you greatly, but now you are in a light, you will forever see in the Heavenly Realm, and Gods arms. I will always miss you.

To the Family I know it is difficult, but may God embrace you all and give you the needed strength. He is gone but never forgotten.

Right On: An Ode to Gregory Johnson

Right on, Gregory --

A soul wired with wonder,

A heart tuned to help.

Even when the lights of the world were dark to your eyes,

You saw more than most.

A technology enthusiast --

You spoke in ports and pins,

Knew the hum of a machine by its mood,

Could feel the difference between a four- and six- pin connector

With nothing but your fingertips

And a lifetime of curiosity.

You taught the world

That sight is not required to see,

That laughter can light a room brighter than any screen,

That knowledge, shared freely, multiplies. You were never too busy to

Never too proud to joke,

Ode to gregory.pdf, page 2

Never too coy to learn

Always eager to lift others up --

With a quip, a story,

A moment of your time

That felt like a gift.

Now the silence where your voice once rang

Feels too loud.

The world dims,

For you were light in so many unseen ways.

But right on, Gregory --

May your journey continue

Through circuits of stardust and networks of peace.

You will be sorely missed,

But never forgotten.

*Celebrating a life of knowledge, kindness, and humor.
Rest in power, Gregory.*

The man who is responsible for everything I am. I am so devastated
I don't have my daddy anymore - yes my daddy. I miss you more and more with each passing moment. I know your stress is gone. I know you can see again. I know you're in a better place. But I miss you SO much. I love you forever and always. Your Son, your

“ My world turned upside down upon hearing the news of Greg’s passing. It’s still hard to believe that you’re no longer here. Greg, you were an awesome friend and confidante. You know, your middle name could have been “hard-drive” for the many computers you build for myself, my family, and of course my friends. Please know that I am keeping your family in my thoughts and prayers. Finally, you’ve got your EYES! Rest in Paradise my Brother! - Marcus Palmore

“ Greg, you will be sadly missed. You were our tech repair friend who kept my family’s computers running. No matter the time or day you were always available to help. We shared many conversations about world events, family, theories and modern technologies. You were always up for conversations and laughs. I will never forget your laugh. You loved repairing and building your computers with the lights, bells and whistles! Earth has lost a true friend but heaven has gained a true soldier. Rest in peace my brother friend, love Donn.
