

Mr. Kevin Anthony Dudley

February 24, 1961 - January 19, 2024

Kevin Anthony Dudley, aka "Pinky", 62, of Washington, DC, passed away on January 19, 2024 after succumbing to complications of Multiple Myeloma (cancer).

Pinky was born on February 24, 1961, to Lucy Dudley and Kenneth Adams in Washington, DC. After Pinky graduated from McKinley Technology High School, he held several positions at rental car companies, Safelight, the United States Park Service, and as a sheet metal fabricator.

He loved to spend time watching old Western TV shows and films, listening to music, taking road trips, and hanging out with family and friends.

Pinky was predeceased by his mother, Lucy Dudley, and siblings David Able, Sandra Sams, Harry ("Bucky" aka Shilah Hanee), Elizabeth ("Lizzy") and Janice Dudley. He is survived by his children, Karen Jordan (Fiancé Brian Calloway) and Kamari Dockey, his siblings Brenda, Allen, Karl, DeWayne (Trina), Geno Dudley (Savinia), and a host of nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

We are most grateful for the staff at the MedStar Georgetown Cancer Institute at MedStar Washington Hospital Center, including his Oncologist of more than 14 years, Dr. Aarthi G. Shenoy; and Yemi Adewole, Case Manager, who assisted him with housing and checked up on him regularly.

A viewing and funeral service will be held at Pope Funeral Home on February 2, 2024 at 2:00 pm. An additional scattering ceremony for Pinky's ashes will occur at a later date.

☞ True story...One day I dreamed of Jesus coming back in the sky with horses and riders they had on armor and spears. As I looked up at them coming closer they got bigger than houses. I woke up and a friend of my mine came to me later on that day and told me that last night she dreamed of a black and white cow that was the size of a house. I told her about my dream too. The dreams happened on the same night. She said she ain't playing around with life no more because this is serious. One day I woke up saying the Lord's Prayer and that same friend told me that she did also on the same morning. She would come to me for dream interpretations. I was able to interpret the dreams. Meaning that he is real, big like giants and he is coming back like the Bible said. The fantastic funeral coming home service for One of the Black Cheyenne Rangers of Washington DC from the 1970's my little Cowboy Man brother Kevin Anthony Dudley (Pinky) 2/24/1961-1/19/24. Now qualified to ride on high in the skies with the Lord Jesus Christ and the other sky riders. 19 :11-16. From: His sister Brenda Ann Dudley 2/4/24

“ Kevin had an undeniable passion for horses, and he thrived when he was in their presence. One of his favorite activities was going on horseback rides alongside his cousins and closest friends. Whenever they hit the trails together, you could see how excited and alive he felt. I remember one summer afternoon many years ago when we decided to go on a long trail ride. The anticipation was palpable as we saddled up and prepared for our adventure. Kevin, with his trademark smile and infectious energy, couldn't wait to get started. As we trotted along the scenic paths, Kevin took the lead, navigating through the terrain with confidence. His connection with the horses was remarkable. It was as if they understood each other on a deeper level. He had a unique ability to communicate with the animals and make them feel at ease. During these rides, Kevin would share stories, jokes, and laughter with us. The bond he had with his cousins and friends grew stronger with each gallop. We all felt a sense of freedom and exhilaration exploring nature together. There was never a dull moment when Kevin was around. Horseback riding provided a perfect escape for Kevin and his cousins.

Kevin's enthusiasm for horseback riding was infectious, and he had a way of inspiring those around him to embrace the joy and freedom that comes from being on horseback. He valued the camaraderie and shared experiences, and cherished every opportunity to ride alongside his cousins and close friends.

Kevin Pinky Dudley's passion for horseback riding will always be remembered.
