“ Madison was the gift of all gifts one could ask for. She was such a funny but an extremely smart kid. She walked before she crawled and got a kick out of making people laugh while being silly. A time unforgettable for me was when, maddie was just about 2yrs old and while we were all riding in the car. me and her mom (best friend) was talking about something. But even while the radio was playing, Madison says "don't be frustrated". Her mom and i both laughed cause What in The world would a 2yr old know about being frustrated? Not only that it was right on time within our conversation. So i said to her, you don't know what frustrated is. She said to me "uh hmm ". So i asked her , what does frustrated mean? She in response tell me " it means when you trying to do something and you can't do it". Me and my best friend laughed even harder in disbelief at how ? How dis she know this and whole time i just knew she would've been wrong. Siked my mind. Like what did i expect when we didn't baby talk with her. I would sing to her often as she would do this continous cooing sound as if she was sing back to me. And every time i'd come over she would be the one to run and jump on me no matter if I was stable on my feet or not. I'm going to miss you forever and a day

“ Madison was a very quiet spirit. She really was the light when she was around. She didn't mind helping us in the house. Her beautiful smile and meek spirit will be missed. I will always keep you in my heart. Love your Aunt in law kisha
