“ We miss you lady! Your words of encouragement, fussing, laughter, hugs, and your kisses! You never played about us and I pray you know we never played about you. 6 months later and it hasn't been easy. I love you so much “ Hey Ma, I was thinking about you and thought I would come visit you here. It is lonely in the apartment we shared so I come into work more often, now. When I came home sometimes I expect to see you in your room but I realized I will not. You will not say “oh you are home” nor will I hear you call my name a thousand times in the few hours I am home. I will not hear you ask me “what's for dinner or what are we grotto eat.” I have so many emotions going on in one day. I am sad that you are not here. I am happy you are no longer suffering. I am angry because you left. I am anxious because I wonder if there was someone missed or could have done differently. I ask why you left so soon. As the days go by, I take them second by second and moment by moment. There is no pain like losing a mom, my mom. It hits differently. I love you ma, I miss you ma.

“ She would always sing “I love my precious” or “I love baby” to my daughter. I’m going to miss them singing this to each other
